

The American Red Cross shelters, feeds and provides emotional support to victims of disasters; supplies nearly half of the nation's blood; teaches lifesaving skills; provides international humanitarian aid; and supports military members and their families. The Red Cross is a charitable organization—not a governmental agency—and depends on volunteers and the generosity of the American public to perform its mission. For more information, visit RedCross.org.